Brenno Boccadoro is a swiss musicologist, professor at the Music Departement of the University of Geneva. In 1995 he was he was in charge of researching the sources of the Dictionnaire de Musique of Jean-Jacques Rousseau, and he wrote an appendix about Giuseppe Tartini – Tartini, Rousseau et les Lumières – for the first critical edition of the Dictionnaire, in: B. Gagnebin, J. Starobinski, J.-J. Eigeldinger, S. Baud-Bovy, O. Pot (sous la dir. de), Jean-Jacques Rousseau, Oeuvres complètes, 1995. After that he wrote a book about ancient Greek theories on musical ethos: Ethos e Varietas. Trasformazione qualitativa e metabole nella teoria musicale dell'Antichità greca, 2002. In the following years he devoted himself to the humanist interpretations of those ideas: The psychotropic power of music during the Renaissance, in: Thomas Cochrane, Bernardino Fantini and Klaus Scherer (eds.), The Emotional Power of Music. Multidisciplinary perspectives on musical arousal, expression, and social control, 2013. In 2012, for the 300th anniversary of the birth of J.J. Rousseau, he published a new critical edition of the Dictionnaire de Musique [with Amalia Collisani] in: J.-J. Rousseau, Œuvres complètes, 2012; as well of his musical writings, Écrits sur la musique, vol. XII. In the last few years he wrote about Early Jazz.

Bernardino Fantini. Born in Nepi (Viterbo, Italy) in 1947, Bernardino Fantini is professor emeritus of the history of medicine and health at the Faculty of Medicine of the University of Geneva. He is the president of the Italian Institute of Anthropology. His research and teaching domains are the history of epidemics and public health, the history of molecular biology, the philosophy of life sciences, the theoretical and experimental study of the relationships between music, science and medicine.

Carlo Gabbani graduated in Philosophy and in Psychology and holds a Phd in Philosophy. He teaches Philosophy and History. He is the author of: Epistemologia e clinica (2013); Realismo e antirealismo scientifico. Un'introduzione (2018); and the editor of: Two Images. The Manifest and Scientific Conceptions of the Human Being, 50 Years On (2012); (with R. Campaner), Causation and Mental Causation (2015); (with G. Bonino and P. Tripodi), Biblioteca analitica: i testi fondamentali. Linguaggio, conoscenza, mente (2020).

Maria Teresa Monti is Professor of the History of Science at the University of Eastern Piedmont (Department of Humanities). She is a member of the Scientific Board of the “Società Italiana di Storia, Filosofia e Studi Sociali della Biologia e della Medicina” (BIOM) and of the National Editions of Lazzaro Spallanzani’s and Antonio Vallisneri’s Works. She is a long-standing collaborator with the Institutes for the History of Medicine of the Universities of Geneva, Lausanne, and Bern and with the “Société d’Histoire et Epistémologie des Sciences de la Vie,” where she is vice-chairperson. Her research focuses on the history of life sciences in the Early Modern period and she has published critical editions, papers and monographs on European scientists (Haller, Spallanzani, Vallisneri, Corti) and scientific institutions during the Ancien Régime.

Yamina Oudai Celso has been Balzan Prize Post-doctoral Fellow at University of Geneva, lecturer at Ca’ Foscari University of Venice (faculty of philosophy), where she achieved her PhD in philosophy, and lecturer at Bicocca University of Milan (faculty of psychology). She also worked at Paris 7 Diderot University and obtained a French habilitation to the functions of Associate Professor. Her research interests mainly concern history and analysis of Freud’s and Nietzsche’s opera omnia, dynamic psychiatry and German philosophy of late 19th century, history of emotional lexicon, epistemology of psychoanalysis, E. R. Kandel’s neuropsychanalysis.

Marc J. Ratcliff is Lecturer of epistemology and history of psychology at the Faculty of psychology and educational sciences of the University of Geneva, and scientific collaborator to the Archives Jean Piaget in Geneva. He did a PhD in developmental psychology (1995), then a second PhD in history of sciences (2001) at University College London. He published papers, books and edited books in the fields of the history of science, epistemology and history of psychology, concerning experimental practices in sciences, shared knowledge and models of innovation. His current works deal with scientific discovery (Genèse d’une découverte, 2016) and the origins and development of psychology in Geneva, particularly concerning Jean Piaget.

Aldo Trucchio is researcher at the Centre interuniversitaire de recherche sur la science et la technologie (CIRST), in Montréal. He took a PhD in Modern political philosophy (University of Naples “L’Orientale”) and a PhD in French modern literature (University of Geneva). He worked as a teacher and/or researcher in Academic Institutions in Naples, Salerno, Paris, Mexico City, Geneva, Berne, Lausanne, Le Mans, Québec City and Montréal. His scientific interests include political philosophy and the history of the relationship between literature and science from the perspective of Medical Humanities. For his bibliography, see: <https://uqam.academia.edu/AldoTrucchio>

Fernando Vidal is Research Professor, Catalan Institution for Research and Advanced Studies, and Professor, Medical Anthropology Research Center, Rovira i Virgili University. A former Guggenheim Fellow and graduate of Harvard University, the Universities of Geneva and Paris, and the EHESS, he was permanent Senior Research Scholar, Max Planck Institute for the History of Science, Berlin. He works on the history of the mind and brain sciences, and currently examines how the disorders of consciousness articulate with notions and practices of subjectivity. Among his publications are The Moral Authority of Nature (ed. with L. Daston), The Sciences of the Soul: The Early Modern Origins of Psychology, and (with F. Ortega) Brain Brains: Making the Cerebral Subject. Web: icrea.academia.edu/FVidal.
